Islands in the Stream: The BVI in Asia

by MICHAEL GAGNE

"Asian economies continue to change, grow and prosper, we are likely to see the continued use of the BVI by businesses and business owners in the region."

British Virgin Islands (BVI) companies have played a significant role for corporates and high net worth individuals in Asia for almost 30 years and the jurisdiction's recent anniversary celebrations for the introduction of the International Business Companies Act (IBC Act) (introduced in 1986) used a fitting tribute to the important role in both inbound and outbound transactions that the BVI now plays in the region. The BVI's decision to open a representative office here in Hong Kong (in 2013) is further evidence of both Asia's importance to the BVI and the BVI's current position as a conduit for international business in the region.

From the date of the introduction of the IBC Act to now, the use of the jurisdiction and its "flexible" offerings have become increasingly sophisticated, reflecting the ongoing growth and development of the Chinese and other Asian economies. The BVI has moved away from just being a holding company adjunct to personal and corporate structures to being a key component. This article will take a look at some of the current uses in Asia of BVI companies and other related jurisdictional offerings.

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW

Exclusive Interview with Mr. Carson Wen, JP-Jones Day

"The biggest competitive advantage of the BVI is its efficient government, effective regulatory regime and world-class infrastructure in terms of law firms and corporate services providers. The same is not true of most other offshore jurisdictions."

Mr. Carson Wen has a distinguished career in law, business and politics. He has practised law for 30 years at his own Hong Kong partnership and subsequently as partner and Chairman of China Practice of a major US law firm, and then as Jones Day, a leading global law firm. Mr. Wen has been named as a leading advisor on Chinese law, mergers & acquisitions and capital markets work in Who's Who of the Law, Asia Pacific Legal 500, AsiaLaw Leading Lawyers, Chambers Asia and China's Top 200. He is also named in the International Who's Who and Who's Who of the World.

Mr. Wen has been doing BVI business in Asia for more than two decades.

Why did you choose the BVI?

Because of its competitive advantage. The biggest competitive advantage of the BVI is its efficient government, effective regulatory regime and world-class infrastructure in terms of law firms and corporate services providers. The same is not true of most other offshore jurisdictions.
